—THE NEW YORK TIMES

Is there a "killer instinct" in man—an instinct less controlled than in the most savage of animals? Yes, says famed scientist Konrad Lorenz, in shedding revolutionary new light on aggressive drive held in common by both man and beast. On Aggression reveals is startling, shocking, and of vicious cern. In the words of The New York Times: "One trusts—it will be read not only by natural scientists, Rand Corporation thinkers, members of the Pentagon, fists, presidents... One of the most important books of our
